BABY CROP IN U.S. INCREASES; MORTALITY LOW

Only 87 Deaths Per 1,000—
Over 2,500,000 Born
Every Year

(Reuters Service)
New York, September 28. (by mail).—America's baby crop in 1919 was a new record, says the American Child Hygiene Association.

An annual preliminary report on vital statistics by that organization, covering data from 269 cities with an aggregate population of 31,000,000, shows the infant mortality rate declined to the "encouraging figure of 87 deaths per 1,000 babies," a saving of nearly 12,000 babies over the 1918 rate, and 7,000 fewer deaths than in 1917.

In the cities covered by the report 680,000 births were recorded, while in the entire country it is estimated that there are 2,500,000 new-comers annually. All of the cities included have populations of 10,000 or more.

Babies seemed to thrive well in some of the larger cities, where formally the death-rate was very high. "Ten years ago," the report said, "it was the aim of many a department of health to see this rate fall below the 100 mark. In 1919, only four of the 24 larger cities were above it."

PREMIER OFFERS EMPLOYMENT TO EX-SERVICE MEN

(Reuters Service)
London, October 20.—Replying to a question in regard to unemployment in the House of Commons today, Mr. Lloyd George pointed out that many thousands of ex-service men, of whom 140,000 were at present unemployed, could be employed in the building trade, seeing that half a million new houses were required. Proposals dealing with this matter had been made to the trade unions concerned.

The Government, he added, had also approved of other proposals, for finding work, including road-making, and had appealed to the trade unions to suspend certain rules in order to admit additional men to the iron-foundry and railway wagon-building trades. He hoped that in these ways the problem of unemployment, especially of ex-service men, would be adequately met during the winter, but he pointed out that the coal strike would enormously increase the number of unemployed.

Unification Of Asia's Peoples Is Sought By Afghanistan Amir

(Reuters Service)

New York, September 27 (by mail).—The Amir of Afghanistan, for the first time in history, according to Dr. N. S. Hardiker of the India Information Bureau here, has invited Hindus to settle in his country, to accomplish which he has announced the following royal concessions said to indicate a movement for the unification of the peoples of Asia:

- 1.—Non-interference in the observance of Hindu religious beliefs;
- 2.—Freedom of Hindus to travel and settle in any part of the country;
- 3.—Government protection of Hindu homes;
- 4.—Hindu representation in the Afghan Assembly;

5.—Unrestricted travel permitted Hindu women.

There are more than 230,000,000 Hindus and 70,000,000 Moslems in India and an exodus of many of the latter to Afghanistan, according to Dr. Hardiker, already is under way.

"The proposals of the Amir are aimed," he said, "at dispelling the notion that Afghanistan is partial to Islamism. The proclamation clearly shows that all freedom and protection will be extended to Hindu subjects, and that no interference will be exercised in the religious observances of the Hindus, however much these may differ from the beliefs of the Mohammedans and Afghans. The Amir undoubtedly is endeavoring to promote a better feeling between Afghanistan and India."

No Superior Features In German Naval Craft

(Reuters Service)

Washington, Sept. 25 (by mail).—Detailed examination of surrendered German U-boats built during the war has produced nothing to forecast important changes in American submarines, officers at the Navy Department assert.

After careful study of the German craft and a thorough test in the long cruise across the Atlantic, American experts have found only a few unimportant details worthy of incorporating in new American submarines.

In periscopes and optical fittings the German boats were superior to pre-war American submarines, it was admitted. Periscopes of new Navy submarines, however, are superior to the best similar fittings found on the captured vessels, it was said.

Engines NOT SUPERIOR
The engine equipment of the German boats was praised by American officers, but it was declared that the mechanical plants of the enemy craft were in no respect superior to those already in use in the United States Navy.

In many points, particularly that of mechanical simplicity, roominess and comfort for the crew, the American boats are regarded as superior to the German craft.

Examination of the surface vessels surrendered by Germany and brought to the United States, recently is now in progress. In one respect the German ships won the praise of many officers of the Department.

This was the use of solid watertight bulkheads between the subdivisions of the hull below decks. No doors for communication below were found in the German ships, the members of the crew being forced to go "up and over" to move from one compartment to another.

KEPT AFLOAT AT JUTLAND

It was this construction that kept German vessels in the fight at the Battle of Jutland after they had been severely punished by British fire, officers said.

A feature of the German ships that somewhat surprised American officers was the lack of provisions for the comfort of the crews. Officers' quarters were found to be about on a par with those in the American Navy, but little attention had been paid to the enlisted men.

The larger ships had cooking accommodation for but a small part of the battle crew, it was said, and it was believed that the ships were constructed on the theory that any engagement that they participated in would be within a short distance of the home port, probably in the North Sea as the bunk capacities were very limited.

CREWS HOUSED ASHORE
During periods of inaction the men were housed ashore in barracks, and during periods of any duration they were but poorly supplied with hot food.

Contrasted with the elaborate galleys and bakeries on American ships, with provisions for long cruises at sea away from supply bases, the German craft were primitive, it was said.

The final disposition to be made of the German vessels has not been decided. They will either be broken up at Navy yards or used as targets for the fleets.

FRENCH COUNCIL MAKES DRASTIC SERVICE DEMANDS

Insists Tramway Company
Make Extensions Or Will Take Over Corporation

THREATENS ITS CHARTER

Must Forfeit Franchise Unless Immediate Improvement In Public Utilities Is Made

Summary demands that the Compagnie Francaise de Tramways, d'Éclairage Electrique et des Eaux make such extensions as will provide for adequate supply and distribution of water and electricity and proper tramway service, with the alternative of losing its present charter have been made by the French Municipal Council.

The governing body of the French Concession has sent the ultimatum to the Tramway Company that action must be taken before December 9 to remedy present conditions. Unless the company satisfies the demands made in a letter sent by the Council, the administration of the public service corporation will be assumed by the Council.

SPECIAL REPORT

The action follows a report made by a special commission appointed at a meeting of the Council held on October 4 and the decision is announced in a Municipal Bulletin published yesterday.

The investigating committee was composed of Mr. A. Chapeaux, member of the Council; Mr. P. Premet, legal advisor to the Municipality; Mr. H. de Bolesson, municipal engineer, and Secretary P. Legendre of the Council. The committee made its report at the meeting of October 7, the Council made the decision published in yesterday's bulletin.

STARTED IN SUMMER
The agitation for better service by the corporation began early in the Summer and has been the subject of lengthy correspondence between the Tramway Company and the French Council. Demand was made for more efficient distribution of electricity and the corporation asked permission to install a high power tension line to connect with the electricity supply of the International Settlement.

Electricity Department. In the Council's ultimatum to the Tramway Company this is denied, the Council believing that additional equipment should be obtained by the Company.

The Tramway Company has been ordered to secure a competent and responsible director or manager. The position has been vacant since the death of General Manager Courcier.

A FINAL WARNING

Final warning is given by the Council that an agreement must be reached with the Chinese authorities so that an additional water main may be installed. The Council adds that unless this is done the work will be done by the Municipality, the expense to be met by the Tramway Company.

The final demand is for an efficient remedying of the present insufficient distribution of water and electricity and inadequate tram service. Necessary extensions must be made so that present needs of the Concession may be properly met and future development of the Concession may be provided for.

CONDITIONS IN NORTH HONAN
The following report of conditions in North Honan, dated Weihsien, September 15 has been received by the Procureur Sazarielles in Shanghai:

The draught which has reigned here about a year is now almost general but the places which have been most stricken and where the misery is most poignant are those where cotton is grown this being the case in the sub-prefecture of Tehangfetu.

Grain is there not only absolutely priceless but almost nonexistent. The trains which transport grain are very often plundered as at Weihsien and at Singlang; the sub-prefects have no power to insure transportation as our own sub-prefect told me when I wanted to transport grain to Tehangfetu.

Land and cattle are without value and people have now commenced to sell women and young girls. The inhabitants emigrate towards the South and the West hoping there to find sufficient to keep alive but they are now beginning to be turned back and to return here decimated by hunger and illness. As a consequence the roads are in certain places sprinkled with corpses.

Board Of Trade Head
Urges Common Sense
Attitude

(Reuters Service)

London, Oct. 20.—Negotiations which may settle the coal strike are believed to be assured. It is the general opinion that both sides are preparing proposals. The press maintains that yesterday's debate in the House of Commons has cleared the way for an understanding.

London, October 19.—A crowded attendance marked the resumption of the Parliamentary session today, in view of the prospect of an immediate debate on the coal crisis.

London, Oct. 19.—In the House of Commons this afternoon, Sir Robert Horne, President of the Board of Trade, made a statement in regard to the coal strike. He dwelt on its grave nature, deprecated recrimination, and urged the exercise of goodwill and common sense. He declared that since the inquiry by Mr. Justice Sankey's Commission, the miners' wages had increased more than the cost of living.

STRANGE TRADE

Emphasizing the disastrous effects of the strike, he pointed out that a million miners were idle, shipping was held up, blast furnaces were being damped down, factories in all parts of the country were being closed and tens of thousands of workers were being thrown out of employment daily.

The trade of the country would be gradually strangled, and this would entail hardship and starvation to great masses of the community.

Sir Robert declared that this issue had never been submitted to the miners. Reports from the coal-fields showed that many miners did not know that the alternative to the acceptance of the Government's proposals was to strike. The Government, he said, was open to any suggestion whereby a peaceful solution and common sense. He declared and he urged all to work to that end.

Frenchmen Deny Touting Harding

(Reuters service)

Washington, Oct. 19.—The French Government has sent an informal reply to President Wilson's inquiry as to whether the French Government had authorized anybody to approach Senator Harding in relation to the League of Nations. The reply declares that the French Government has not authorized anyone to approach Senator Harding, either officially or unofficially.

In his letter to Senator Harding, arising out of the latter's statement as to his having been approached by representatives from France President Wilson questioned the accuracy of the report, pointed out that Senator Harding was a private citizen of a nation that was not a member of the League of Nations, and dwelt on "the grave and extraordinary interest" that would be drawn from such a statement.

COX SCORES HARDING
Nashua, New Hampshire, October 20.—Governor Cox, in the course of a speech here, dealing with Senator Harding's statement concerning the French overtures, said the facts were such as to justify the conclusion that Senator Harding had deliberately attempted to deceive the people.

Washington, October 20.—Mr. J. P. Tumulty, Secretary to the President, has announced that inquiries have been made in France relative to Senator Harding's statement that he had been approached by French representatives regarding the League of Nations.

Springfield, Mass., October 20.—Governor Cox, in passing through here, addressed a crowd for five minutes, appearing in his pyjamas. He had not intended to speak before reaching Worcester.

ROOT DEALS WITH LEAGUE
New York, October 20.—Mr. Elihu Root, in his only address of the present campaign dealing with the League of Nations issue, said that the treaty with Germany would have been ratified if President Wilson had been willing. "Mr. Wilson was not willing," he said. "He insisted that the treaty should not be changed. I think it most objectionable to American people that they shall enter into an agreement maintained by force of arms for all time, affecting the dispositions of territory and sovereignty of this country. I think the majority of American people wish peace with and among the nations, and that the United States will do her best and bear a full part towards bringing about some organization."

The booklet is divided into two parts, the first containing thirty short lessons based on idiomatic usages and the second part a series of twenty reading lessons designed to illustrate and supplement the first lessons.

"General Post"

"General Post" is a pleasing little comedy with any amount of fine dialogue and excellent character studies. It is one of those plays which was conceived by the war, and without doubt had a great deal to do with the wonderful change in thoughts and manners that then took place.

The play only calls for seven parts, and the same setting fills all that the mounting requires. There is little action, and none of the situations can be called a thriller and yet a very well filled house took to the piece from the beginning, and the final fall of the curtain found everyone, present showing their appreciation in no uncertain manner.

Everyone in the cast played his or her part so well that not a weak spot could be detected anywhere. Mr. Oliver Twiss can be heartily congratulated upon the way he handled the part of "Sir Dennis Broughton." He gave a really convincing portrayal. Miss Muriel Johnston as the wife was always effective. I liked the "Alice" particularly good in the light comedy parts, and most of "Alice" calls for that sort of playing, but there was just one little scene that he had in Act 3, which demands that he shows some genuine feeling. Leonard Stephens played it in the right sympathetic vein.

Miss Beryl-Barracough is a heroine. She was undoubtedly suffering from the prevailing "flu" or something like it, and this only makes her very delightful work as "Betty Broughton" the more remarkable. Well done Miss Barracough.

The big part of the comedy is that of "Edward Smith," who starts as a tailor, with a distinct leaning to matters military, long before the war was thought about, by the thoughtless found his real place on the battle field, where he wins honor and glory.

Carl Lawson played the part. We have already seen him in a number of parts, and he has always given complete satisfaction. I fancy that he likes the part of "Edward Smith." He throws all his experience and natural cleverness into his portrayal and has most to do with making the show one of the successes of the present season.

Both David Keir (Wilson) and Norman Thompson (Albert Smith) in minor parts made the most of their opportunities. Tonight, "General Post" will be repeated and can be recommended as a good performance.

Sunday School Representatives
Will Gather In Shanghai

Plans have been announced by the committee appointed by the Sunday Schools of Shanghai to hold a Sunday School Convention here on November 6 and 7 when about 30 delegates to the World Sunday School Convention, now in session in Tokio, are expected to arrive here by way of Korea.

All the local Chinese churches will participate in the convention. The local committee is headed by Mr. K. S. Zee, secretary of the Y.M.C.A., while the Rev. T. C. Wu is executive secretary.

The third reason is the desire of the Sunday school leaders here to exchange views with those from the world, as these 30-odd delegates are leaders in industrial, banking and church improvements."

Principal speakers at meetings here will include Dr. C. T. Wang, China's envoy at Versailles; Mr. David Z. T. Yul, head of the lecture department of the Y. M. C. A., Mr. Frank L. FAMINE RELIEF BENEFIT TONIGHT

These poor people a little and I shall continue to do my utmost. Our resources are very limited and that which I am able to do is quite inadequate considering the crying necessity.

The sub-prefecture of Wuhan, the prefecture of Tchangtsu, and the prefecture of Hwangshu have besides famine and drought made great ravages during the last month.

Mr. Meroni, Director of the Red Cross, has already during this month gathered together about a hundred babies but it will be difficult to bring them up as very few wet nurses can be found.

LE CORN HARVESTED

Regarding the number of people actually in need I think that the prefecture of Tchangtsu altogether about two million inhabitants of which at the moment of writing those in need do not form more than a half of the population but if during the autumn we have no rainfall so grain cannot be sown the year will be terrible.

In the prefecture of Hwangshu a little corn has been harvested but in the prefecture of Shweifu although the famine is not so general as in Tchangtsu yet it will be general if no rain falls.

Now as regards the means to be taken to the assistance of these poor people. As the prefecture of Tchangtsu is infested with bandits transportation of grain is impossible. It is not practical to gather together a large number of the starving as we have no places suitable for this purpose and there will be danger of an epidemic.

The best way will perhaps be to give to such families which are really in need a sufficient quantity of grain of good quality provided however, that the sub-prefects are able to supply the towns and markets.

BANKING ORGANISES

OR FAMINE RELIEF

An International Famine Relief Committee has been organized in Nanking under the Chairmanship of the Commissioner of Foreign Affairs, Hon. E. T. Wen, and with the active support of the Military and Civil Governors, the resident foreign Consuls, the leading clergy, officials, educators and business men.

The chairman of the solicitation committee, Comptroller S. C. Han of the International Export Company, announces an initial gift of 10,000 from his own company and subscriptions of 15,000 from both the foreign head and the chief compradore.

The students and faculty of the Government Teacher's College are acting unitedly and Nanking University has made up a sum in excess of $3,000. The Union Theological Seminary is also acting as a unit in an effort to render substantial assistance.

M. C. A. IN EFFORT
The City Y. M. C. A. has been assisting in publicity work. Two largely attended entertainments resulted in gifts amounting to about $700.00 and plans are on foot to organize a lecture bureau to furnish speakers for the theatres, schools and churches as well as to give stereopticon lectures throughout the city in various Yamen, public parks and other places. In addition to the $500,000, given by the will of the late Governor Li Houli, the Committee aims to secure $100,000, in Nanking.

The Board of Control includes the British, Japanese and American Consuls as well as heads of the leading foreign business firms. Especial care will be taken in the distribution of funds. This is insured by the personnel of the distribution committee. The American Consul, Mr. J. K. Davis, is chairman and Prof. F. W. Wilson, president of the Red Cross, is acting with Mr. A. Tsou, Prof. D. Y. Lin and Rev. K. T. Chung as the committee.

Subscriptions may be paid to C. Wade-Jones, treasurer of the Red Cross or to the local banks.

Middlesex Are County Champions

BY H. J. HENLEY

(From London Daily Mail)

The long, keen race for the County Championship is over and Middlesex have won.

There was a great end to a great season at Lords yesterday. A competition unprecedented in its extreme closeness was crowned by a close match. A county which was in danger of being robbed of first place by a county with an inferior record kept its position against heavy odds. And what to thousands must have been most gratifying of all, P. F. Warner led Middlesex to the championship in the last year of his captaincy and his last year in county cricket.

In the morning the team's chance of success had been remote, and when the news came through that Lancashire had beaten Worcestershire most people were ready to believe that the championship for 1920 was already decided. Only by beating Surrey could Middlesex remain at the top, and it looked as if a draw was the most they could accomplish.

NEVER CAN TELL

But you never can tell in cricket, and the seemingly impossible was accomplished. The Surrey bowling that had reduced Middlesex to tame defense in the first innings was freely scored from. Before the first wicket fell 208 runs were in the book. But although P. F. Warner declared with seven batsmen out for 316, the odds were still long in favor of Surrey. They needed no more than 244 to win, and three hours remained for play. There would have been no need for Surrey to show any sensational hitting in order to beat the clock. Runs obtained at an ordinary rate of progress would have served their purpose, and the wicket was of the best.

But two hours and a quarter later Surrey were all out for 188, and a great cheering crowd was rushing across the ground eager to carry Warner to the pavilion. Middlesex had won by 53 runs, with forty minutes to spare, and were champions for the first time since 1903.

HOW IT HAPPENED

To say that much of the Surrey batting was poor is not to belittle Middlesex. Most of the batsmen were fairly and squarely beaten by the bowling which Warner used with splendid judgment. The clock was an all-round triumph, and the side, with G. T. S. Stevens by far the most successful bowler. Half a dozen of the team could claim to have played a winning part in one of the most remarkable games ever witnessed at Lords. And it has been by all-round cricket that Middlesex have won their way to the head of the counties.

From the first Middlesex had everything to gain and little of value to lose. At the worst a defeat could only cause them to finish third instead of second. At the best they would win the championship. In ordinary circumstances Warner's declaration would have been of an exceedingly sporting character—a courageous gamble to match a victory against time. But in the unusual circumstances that existed he could not have delayed much longer without showing false caution.

In brief, he risked a defeat that would matter little on the chance of winning the biggest prize of the cricket season. And the long chance came off.

TWO SCORED CENTURIES

C. H. Sleet and Lee both scored centuries, and they had battled with a fair amount of freedom. But the rapid fall of five wickets after lunch checked the pace of run-getting, and made that speculative declaration necessary.

Surrey began by getting runs just fast enough to keep on terms with the clock, as it were, and only two wickets were down with 120 runs scored. But from the moment that Henderson dismissed Shepherd with a magnificent judged catch close to the screen—he had to run back with a good ten yards to get at the ball—the game turned in favor of Middlesex.

Half the side were out when 101 runs were still necessary to Surrey with seventy-five minutes left for play; and the side's prospects began to look hopeless when Sandham, who had batted splendidly for two hours, was caught and bowled. The only bad stroke in his 68 was that which cost him his wicket.

No one else made any stand after that, and although Strudwick and Rushby added a dozen for the last wicket, their partnership was never a serious danger.

MIDDLESEX NEW CAPTAIN

To say that Middlesex are popular champions is hardly adequate. The enthusiastic demonstration outside Lords' pavilion, in which Surrey men joined as heartily as Middlesex men, showed that their success was regarded as the happiest possible end to a season in which the championship has been decided under a system so full of anomalies that at one time rank injustice threatened to be done. It is certain that drastic change will be made in the method of scoring points before next summer.

In the course of a speech from the balcony which Warner made after the match he announced that P. F. Mann will captain Middlesex next year.

TWO FOOTBALL GAMES ON CARD FOR TOMORROW

St. Xavier's Meets Nanyang On Latter's Grounds—Jewish Club Plays Baptists

St. Xavier's soccer football team will not present its full strength when it tangles with Nanyang College on the latter's grounds tomorrow afternoon. Three of the "X" men are on the sick-list, including V. Elliott, but the Saints hope to down the Nanyang aggregation, all the same.

The following is the line-up of the St. Xavier team for the struggle: W. Garry, P. Oliveras, C. Encarnacao, W. Fawcett, H. Johnson, P. Wittsack, F. Gutierrez, F. Reed, J. Silva, T. Aldoguer, T. Macdonald. Reserve—J. Tordy.

J.R.C. vs. BAPTIST COLL

The Jewish Recreation Club will open its 1920 soccer season tomorrow with a game against the Baptist College team on the latter's grounds, beginning at 2:45 o'clock. This contest should give the coaches of the two elevens a pretty fair chance to decide upon the ability of their respective teams.

All-Star Baseball Team Named By Expert Doesn't Include Cobb Or Johnson

Explained, However, Because Both Tyrus And Walter Were Out Of Game By Reason Of Injuries For Good Part Of Season

BY GRANTLAND RICE

(Here is, perhaps, the last dying gasp of the baseball story of 1920, emitted by the N. Y. Tribune's famous Sports-writer and Poet.)

AN ALL-STAR TEAM

You may observe that the heading of this article is not "The All-Star Team" but "An all-Star Team."

Briefly, in behalf of several requests or suggestions that have come in from various fans, it is the team we believe to be the strongest array in baseball upon the 1920 showing.

The 1920 showing would eliminate such stars as Ty Cobb, who has been crippled most of the year and who is 40 points below his normal status, and Walter Johnson, who has been wearing a lame arm two-thirds of the campaign.

These two, on past performances, would make any all-time team even named, but in no far as 1920 is concerned they have both been too roughly handled by Fate to figure with players working out the full schedule.

THE CATCHERS

Main points that figure in the selection of a catcher are stamina, ability to work one hundred or more games, batting and generalship.

The three best in this respect are Schang, of Boston; Schalk, of Chicago, and Perkins, of Philadelphia.

Needing two catchers for a club, our pick would be Schang and Schalk. Schang is a .300 hitter, a hard worker and a good catcher, while Schalk remains one of the hardest working smartest catchers of the decade.

FOUR PITCHERS

You can get all the argument you want in naming four pitchers. Most of the old stars are either skidding or have already skidded. Johnson has had his first sore arm and Cicotte has slipped from his brilliancy of a year ago.

So have Rether and Eller.

Jim Vaughn has had a tougher year than usual and the same applies to Jess Barnes, who led his league in victories last season.

The four best that we see now are Bagby, of Cleveland; Alexander, of Chicago; Cooper, of Pittsburgh, and Shocker, of St. Louis.

They are among the few who have won over twenty games. Bagby will lead the boxmen of both leagues in victories. Alexander, Cooper and Cicotte, pitching for the weakest hitting club in his circuit, has been a consistent winner all year. The same applies to Shocker, who, with a club out of the race, has yet won well over twenty games.

Grimes, of Brooklyn; Mays, of New York; Coveleskie, of Cleveland; Doak, of St. Louis, and Cicotte, of Chicago, have all had good years—but hardly up to the standard set by the four, herein mentioned and inscribed.

THE INFELD

The infield calls for arguments at three points. There can be no argument at first base with Sisler batting .400 and fielding in brilliant fashion. He wins the job here by two spare furlongs.

But the other three places are not so quickly decided.

At second we have Eddie Collins and Rogers Hornsby. Both have been batting between .360 and .370 for the greater part of the year.

Both are fine ball players.

But we string with Eddie Collins, who is not only playing in his old brilliant fashion, but is also having his greatest year at bat.

Collins is the greatest all-around second baseman of all time, and 1920 is one of his greatest years.

What more could you ask—even pitted against a Hornsby? Collins has made mere hits, scored more runs and stolen more bases than his rival, and has had quite an edge in defensive play under second base.

Bancroft will fit in very well at short. He is not only a fast, brilliant, hustling player, but he is outbidding such rivals as Peckinpah, Scott, Maraville, etc., by a decisive margin. The Giant shortstop is now blowing himself to the best year he ever had. He has been a vital factor in New York's dash from the rut toward the top.

The three leading third basemen include Buck Weaver, Heinie Groh and Frank Frisch. Of these Weaver is by all odds the best hitter, a very fine infielder and one of the best pitchers in the game. He wins the place.

Powerboat Makes New World's Mark

Detroit, September 14.—Establishing a new world's record of 71.43 miles an hour, Gar Wood with his Miss America of the Detroit Yacht Club, won the gold challenge cup of the American Powerboat Association here today, taking the final thirty-mile heat of the powerboat classic in 25 minutes, 37.2-5 seconds.

The record was made in the fifth five-mile lap, which was covered in four minutes, twelve seconds. Gar Wood's average speed for the thirty-mile heat today was seventy miles an hour fast. Second place in the race went to Miss Detroit V, with George Wood at the wheel, who finished third in today's heat.

Miss Toronto 11, of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club, F. G. Erickson driving, took third place in the race by finishing second in today's heat, the only heat of the race to be completed by the Canadian boat. The Toronto craft covered the thirty miles in 29 minutes and 43 seconds actual running time, a fraction over sixty miles an hour.

MITCHELL GETS GOLF REVENGE ON DEAL LINKS

Negotiates Stiff Course In Remarkable Figure Of 66 Strokes; Gloats A Bit

BY ABE MITCHELL

I have had my revenge at Deal. I went there the other day with rather mixed feelings, and as I stood on the first tee all the incidents in the melancholy third round in the Championship came rushing back—that ruined putt at the first hole, the inglorious blindness at the fifth, and the other mistakes which combined to ruin my chances. You do not forget an experience of that sort very readily.

DEAL IN 66

One would scarcely think it possible, yet that was my score for the round. It is scarcely necessary to say that most things came off for me and that the conditions were a great deal easier than during the championship. Usually at Deal the wind favors you at the long holes going home. At the end of June it came from the opposite direction blowing over your right shoulder going out and almost dead in front on the homeward journey. It is almost impossible to appreciate the difference when the wind is from the opposite quarter.

So, on my recent round, when I reached the turn in 34, I did not think I had done anything exceptional. The short eighth, by the way, ought to be a favorite hole of mine. You may remember that I got a one there in the championship and now I was down in two.

WHAT THE WIND MEANS

As soon as we turned for home with the wind behind, I realized how much easier the golf was. In the championship we were playing full second shots, sometimes with iron clubs it is three, at most of the holes, and yet missing the green.

The sixteenth, for instance, was all too long for the most fearsome hitters. I do not think even Ray, in his four rounds, once got home in two.

Now I was pin high with a drive and a mashie! The hole was completely transformed by the changed direction of the wind.

In front of the green there is a particularly high hummock with the ground dipping down towards it. It was this hummock which pulled up the second during the championship and left you with a blind shot onto the green.

DEAL IS 'FLUKEY'

Deal links during the Championship were rather harshly criticized, and despite this 66, I still think the golf there a little fluky, though not perhaps to the extent one imagines. You are fearful of the unkind "kik" you may get off the hummocks, but if you choose correctly the place on which to pitch you will usually get a good result.

This round, though not in a competition, is as good as, if not better than, any I have ever played. Previously I placed my 71 at Glenageary first, but—well, one cannot expect to do anything better than 66 on a championship course like Deal.

SLIGHT REVISIONS MADE IN U.S. FOOTBALL RULES; CHANGES ARE DESCRIBED

Try For Goal From Touchdown Will Henceforth Be Kicked From Point Directly In Front Of Posts—Other Changes

BY ROBERT W. MAXWELL

Just to prove that football is about to step into the picture and grab the spotlight for the next three months, Jake Gray comes to bat with an announcement that the official football guide for 1920, published by Spalding's, now is ready for perusal and will make very interesting summer reading. This volume always is welcome at this time of the year for it gives the players, coaches, officials and fans a chance to get all of the dope and get away to a flying start.

TRANS HAVE EQUAL CHANCE

There have been few changes in the playing code, only one being what could be called important. The goal after touchdown will be kicked from a spot directly in front of the goal posts, whether the ball was downed under the posts or at the extreme corner of the field. This does away with the punt out and tries at difficult angles. It also places more value on the touchdown, as it gives the team making a hard fight down the field and finally pushing the ball over, the same chance as the team which scored on a fumble or a long run.

When a man picks up a fumble and runs for a touchdown, he always downs the ball under the goal posts. Thus, the try for goal is quite easy. However, if a team gets inside the five-yard line and the defense stiffens, a touchdown is likely to be made any place along the goal line. Thus, the fumble play has had the advantage up to this year.

GOOD THING FOR GAME

Changing the rule is a good thing for the game. It will do away with a lot of 7 to 6 scores and make the games more even. For example, last year Pittsburgh and Washington and Jefferson played a hard game, each side scoring a touchdown. Pitt's try at goal was an easy one, but Washington and Jefferson kicked from a difficult angle and missed. Penn lost to Dartmouth because a goal was missed and hundreds of other games were decided the same way.

Of course, many goals will be missed next fall, despite the change in the rules, but the teams will have an equal chance and there can be no hard duck stories after the game.

DEFINES MAN IN MOTION

Last year marked the development of so many shift plays that a rule defining a man in motion was inserted.

The Helmsman shift, which put Georgia Tech on the map, the Dartmouth shift and the quick changes used by Princeton, Pittsburgh, Syracuse and others, made this necessary.

However, there is likely to be some confusion until an official interpretation is made. Here is the explanation in the book:

"Both the referee and the linesman are to be charged with the duty of watching a man in motion before the ball is put into play. This has been rendered necessary by the great development of shift plays."

"Another rule bearing upon this is that when a player in making a shift, comes to his position, he must have both feet stationary on the ground."

Nothing is said about a player who jumps forward and lands on both feet, but his body still is moving. This is quite a common occurrence in shift plays, and a lot of coaches will try to prove that off-side cannot be called because the feet were stationary. The rule distinctly says that "at the moment when the ball is put in play, no player of the side which has the ball shall be in motion, except that one man may be in motion directly or obliquely towards his own goal line or line extended."

A BIG ADVANTAGE

If a man is allowed to start the body before the ball is snapped he will have a big advantage in getting away quickly. Therefore this new rule should be made clear at the interpretation meeting next month.

Eastern colleges will keep a close watch on the University of Pennsylvania this year because of the change in coaches. John W. Helmsman has come up from the South with a new system, and it's a cinch he will use it. Helmsman believes in shift plays, and before the season is over is likely to have 11 men hopping around before the ball is put into play. He uses the single and double shift and it will be difficult to have all of the men come

Ebbetts Declares He Is Finished With Baseball

(Reuter's Service)

Chicago, October 21.—The Grand Jury which is inquiring into the charges of corruption in connection with baseball has excused Mr. Ebbetts (president of the Brooklyn Nationals) and Mr. Fraser (president of the Boston Americans) from giving evidence.

Mr. Ebbetts said, he expected to retire from baseball on account of old age, as soon as he had received his price from the club.

to a complete stop before the pigskin is passed. The "both feet on the ground" rule will have its test at Franklin Field.

This, and the abolition of the punt out are the principal changes for 1920.

NO CLIPPING ALLOWED

Last year in the Harvard-Princeton game a substitution was made by Coach Roper, and it is said the wrong man left the game. Much argument followed, but the ruling of Referee Langford was upheld.

This year it has been ruled that after a player has reported to the proper official and the change has been made, the substitution shall be considered completed.

All of which means that if Smith tells the referee he is to take the place of Jones at left halfback and Jones leaves the game, he, meaning Jones, must stay out whether the coach made a mistake or not.

Clipping will not be tolerated. It is to be ruled under unnecessary roughness and will apply whether the ball is dead or not if done to a man who is obviously out of the play.

Another good ruling is on the man making a forward pass. Heretofore it was permissible to treat him roughly after the ball left his hand, but now a stunt like that shall be penalized as unnecessary roughness. It has taken a long time to get this rule in the book, and believe us, it was needed.

Agreeable and Effective

No one likes to take castor oil, calomel, or harsh laxatives, and it is really not necessary. The same beneficial results may be obtained with Dr. Ross' Life Pills with the added advantage of a tonic effect which builds up the system.

This famous remedy thoroughly cleans out the digestive tract, opens the bile-ducts, and stimulates the action of the liver. The result is a clear head, added vitality and vigor, good appetite, good digestion. That is why they are called "Life Pills."

PLAN NEW BUILDING FOR NINGPO Y.M.C.A.

Association's Rapid Growth Calls For Additional Space And Enlarged Staff

(China Press Correspondence)

Ningpo, October 19.—Among the many growing institutions that are doing permanent good in China, the Y.M.C.A. in Ningpo may be mentioned as one of the most promising. It came into existence 18 months ago as the result of strenuous efforts of the local Christians, scholars and business people.

Great impetus was given the second membership campaign last April, when Dr. C. T. Wang visited the port and delivered a number of impressive lectures.

After the campaign a new board of directors was elected with Mr. M. Thomas Tchou as president of the Association. Mr. Tchou studied nine years in Europe and is a graduate of the University of Glasgow in engineering and naval architecture. He and his colleagues, with the general secretary Mr. Y. C. Hu, a graduate of the English Methodist College and Shanghai College at once set to work for the recognition of the association by the National Committee in Shanghai which a fortnight ago, to the great satisfaction of all the well-wishers of the young association sent them the certificate, which recognised it as the twenty-third city Y.M.C.A. in China.

The present membership of 576 is about that of last year and bids fair to pass over the thousand mark before next summer. Among others, the English Evening School carried on by the association, is making splendid headway; the enrollment of students has exceeded 100, and they are rapidly swelling the classes which are conducted by some of the best teachers, including two foreigners, of the port, who all work without remuneration.

Beginning in September a series of lectures has been arranged, and the subjects are so grouped as to give continuous interest. The first four of these forming a group were delivered last month by Mr. Tchou, and the topics were: "My Impressions of Nine Years' Stay in Europe," "Social Life in the West," "Educational Conditions in Europe" and "Home Life of the Westerners."

At present preparations are being made to open a school for the study of the national Chinese language based on the newly devised phonetic system, and for this purpose, a graduate of the Nanking Teachers' College has been engaged as instructor.

The rapid growth of the association naturally demands an increase in the staff of secretaries. In addition to the three now in the association, two are under training in the Shanghai Y.M.C.A. and an educational secretary, is to be selected.

The present premises rented from private owners are far too small to meet the needs of the latest expansion, and the board of directors is busily engaged in planning for a new site and a handsome building that will place the association, in these respects on an equal footing with others of longer standing in China.

Dr. R. Fitch Gives Interesting Talk On Thibetan Border

Large Audience Attends Illustrated Lecture At Royal Asiatic Society Hall

An audience which overtaxed the capacity of the Royal Asiatic Society's lecture hall heard Dr. Robert F. Fitch speak last evening on "The Thibetan Borderland" and paid enthusiastic tribute to the lecturer's entertaining talk and to the remarkable collection of naturally colored photographic slides with which he illustrated his remarks.

Dr. Fitch journeyed to the Thibetan border with two other travellers in 1917, taking four months to the trip and meeting with a number of exciting experiences with bandits, the military, the Llama priests of the border and the natural difficulties met with in travel in those parts. His advice to those who would journey thither is that they pick out a time when rumors of trouble are most rife, as then they will most probably meet with settled conditions on arrival. The worst time to pick, he remarked, was a time when things were apparently quiet.

Dr. Fitch told of some of the difficulties encountered on the way to the Szechuen border, where bandits were so numerous that the party's "military" escort did not dare take its guns along for fear they would be taken away from them by the brigands.

He described the perils of the Yangtze gorges and showed upon the screen a number of beautifully tinted pictures of the river scenery and of the craft plying this dangerous stretch of waters. A most interesting part of the lecture was that dealing with the Kwan Helen irrigation works, by which the now defunct Chinese Lu Pan some 2,000 years ago directed the river waters over the Chengtu plain, so that in that district there has been no day of famine since the scheme's institution. In this connection likewise a number of instructive views was shown and these were followed by a series of pictures of the bridges of the borderland, these structures ranging from the single rope suspension cables by which the people shunt themselves from hillside to hillside across the gullies, to elaborate and beautiful stone arched structures the arches of which rise a hundred feet above low water mark.

Dr. Fitch's descriptive talk was interspersed with the relation of humorous incidents occurring during his trip and in addition to the scenic views thrown upon the screen there were interesting pictures of the various types of peoples found among the mountains and along the river. The meeting was presided over by Dr. Stanley.

During the past years so many

As we do not care to go into the increase in the number and amount of claims made may not have some

Anatole France On The Situation In Europe

"EUROPE is very ill, dying," declared Anatole France recently. And then at the age of 76 he got married. Showing at least that if old Europe is tottering to the grave he still is in the bloom of youth. Perhaps it is socialism that keeps him alive and kicking. Whatever it is, he is very much alive—so much so, apparently that all the rest of the world looks decrepit. He sees hope in Russia. "Out of all this disintegration, I think but one nation may recover—Russia." Since M. France uttered these words, the Socialist parties of Germany and Italy have, with some slight reservations, adhered to the Third, or Moscow, Internationale. And the Miners of Great Britain have gone on strike. "To hate" some one recently said, "is to carry on; to love is to surrender." If this be true we should say that Europe is very far from dying. And M. France has surrendered.

However, his recent address to the proletariat of France, read in connection with what has since happened in Germany, Italy, Russia and Great Britain is worth consideration. He told the workers of France to "stand firm in the present crisis."

His address appeared in L'Humanite (Paris), where he says:

"The proletarian holds momentarily the salvation of France, of Europe, of the world in his hands. The appeal of the Russian Soviets to the French workmen shows how fearful the danger is. France, deserted first by the United States, then by the sister Latin republics, then by the new states of the East, and now, through the recognition of General Wrangel, at odds with England, stands alone. The situation is dreadful, but you workmen can prevent a catastrophe."

This appeal shows that he is not to be beguiled into throwing his influence on the side of the Third Internationale, yet in an interview for the New York Evening Post secured by Joseph Gillomb, he observes of Russia's new birth:

"There is something new coming from that quarter. There is all the travail, strength, and agony of something great being born there. And nothing doomed to early death could rouse such a stir of emotion throughout the entire world. Nothing short of a new and giant spirit could have accomplished what Russian 'Red' armies, barbed and half-starved, did against a ring of enemies. Of course there are tremendous faults and lacks, elemental crudenesses there. But that is all the nature of newly born great things. The whole world is reverberating with what is taking place in Poland. . . . "Socialism, of course, is being born. I mean that for the first time Socialism is a tremendous fact instead of an agitating theme only. Socialism in one form or another is inevitable throughout the world. And it is the one hope for Europe."

When we come to learn just what Mr. France's Socialism is, it may not seem so very different from the desires of those who do not make use of the word. The solution for Europe's plight, if she is to be saved from death, he sees as "action based on a new spirit, on the common interest and needs of all Europe and of all the world." He adds:

"What each nation did during the war on the constructive side, all the nations together must do if they wish not to be crushed by their common enemy, disintegration. For the maximum effort in the war each nation pooled all its resources and its strength and, theoretically at least, the people of that nation were for the time but one family. This on an international plane seems to me the only hope for Europe. To pool in common the resources of the world and to redistribute them on the basis of a common bond and a common need would not only save Europe materially but spiritually, as President Wilson hoped it would be saved."

"But the spirit that made common cause possible within each nation is the very thing that in its ugly and negative aspect works against the same action on an international plane. Patriotism during war means hatred of the other nation as much as love of your own. In this negative sense France's 'patroism' has grown graver since the signing of the armistice. It now not only still hates Germany; it has added other nations, notably Russia, to its hatreds. Toward England and Italy, her chief allies, the feeling in France is also anything but love. Even within its own borders interclass hatred is growing. Instead of democracy growing we have one class demanding dictatorship of the proletariat; the other is a return to monarchy. There are distinct signs in France that the idea of monarchy is growing more popular. Take, for instance, the pomp and ceremonials accorded to the burial of Empress Eugenie. Also the mass of French bourgeoisie has grown not only in numbers but also in its essentially bourgeois passion. Formerly Frenchmen fought for their seigneur, for that body of customs and laws which for the mass of people means country. But now a great many people have acquired a little property and made investments; and today France makes war or peace and Frenchmen fight as their investment dictates. Whether this adds to the sentiment for monarchy in France may be debatable. But what is clear to us and not so much to people outside of France is that the example of England is helping the monarchial idea in France. Our royalists see across the channel a king on the throne. With characteristic lack of imagination they see only the crown and not the puppet. They do not understand the combination of democratic structure and regal trappings which make England so inconsistent in form. A Gambetta Republic is what these Royalists want, and that was not far from monarchy."

His complaint, respecting President Wilson bears the implication that one man was sufficient, had he persisted, against a whole army of opposing statesmen: "He came here like some evangelical clergyman of a new faith, full of fire and of hope. He honestly believed that he had the only true gospel. I am sure he felt he was working in the name of God. His sincerity was not only beyond suspicion; it fired the masses of war-weary Europe. He felt, and they with him, that before this fire of faith and good will toward men all the powers of darkness must scatter. It is difficult for Americans to understand what the coming of President Wilson did to the hopes and hearts of European masses. To realize it, however, one need only consider what it did to President Wilson himself. When he came here he was the most acclaimed man in the world. Today he is broken, not only in health and not only in the eyes of Europe, but also in his own country. They were waiting for him here, the powers of darkness. And after the struggle in the dark it was the evangel of 'let that came out defeated and tarnished with compromise.'"

LEST WE FORGET

October 21st, 1805.—England Expects That Every Man This Day Will Do His Duty."

This is the signal that ran out as the British Fleet sailed against the foe one hundred and fifteen years ago today. The result of the Battle of Trafalgar was victory for the country that called upon every man to do his duty. But "the paths of glory lead but to the grave." Nelson died, does his spirit remain? The next few bitter weeks will provide the answer.

It is a curious fact that the message as it was given to the signaller read "Nelson expects, etc.; but it was pointed out to him that his name would demand a number of flags, and would take a certain amount of time. Then it was that Nelson knowing that "England" could be signalled with one flag gave his order that it should be "England."

And when the Younger Pitt heard of the victory his remark was "England has saved herself by her courage, and she will save Europe by her example." As fine a line as the great Nelson's!

England expects that every man this day will do his duty. The call goes out again. That she will save herself from Bolshevism by her courage, and will help to save Europe by her example, is to be expected, but in doing so she will have to rekindle in one class of her population the spirit of Nelson.

"FIAT EXPERIMENTUM"

For some time we have listened to Bob Smillie on how to work the coal mines to benefit the workers and the public. In general, let them give a practical example. Purchase a coal mine, through their Federation, appoint their own managers, and if they can produce cheaper coal to the public, give their workmen shorter hours, higher wages, and better housing and working conditions. The whole country will support them and vote for nationalisation of the coal mines. But by theoretical preaching only they will never convince the people! —Alec Campbell, Beubar Road, Shots, Lanarkshire.

THE RESTLESS SPIRITS

The conversation around the dinner-table ended, as do most conversations nowadays, with the subject of spiritualism. The guests and the members of the family gave their opinions as to whether or not the dead could communicate with the living, but it remained for "Sweet Sixteen" to present the only original thought on the subject. "It's hard enough now for me to keep up my correspondence," she said. "When I die I want a rest."

ANCIENT HOTEL AD

What is believed to be the original summer resort advertisement recently was unearthed by Jack Currier, manager of the hotel and travel department of the Boston Transcript. The ad, published in the Transcript in 1831, follows:

Why Not The Whole Truth?

(New York Times)

Why did Mr. Charles E. Hughes, in his speech at Trenton devote some 1,800 words to the attempt to prove that under Article X of the League Covenant "we are bound to go to war, if necessary, in order to preserve against external aggression the territorial possession of a member of the League," while saying not one solitary word about the ten other guarantees of peace provided by the Covenant, every one of which would come into operation before resort was had to Article X? Mr. Hughes is a distinguished jurist. He must have read, we have no doubt he has written, many decisions of the court in which the familiar principle was laid down that contracts, statutes and covenants must be considered as a whole, not piecemeal. Then why, we repeat the question, for it is of vital interest in this campaign, does ex-Judge Hughes follow the deplorable example long ago set by the opponents of the League in his party in putting Article X in the very forefront of discussion, as if that were the whole League, as if by joining the League we should find ourselves compelled to send our soldiers to war without antecedent recourse to any other means of preventing war?

What are these means of preventing war that would precede the use of military force contemplated in Article X? They are plainly set forth and cannot escape the attention of any reader of the Covenant. We will recite them in order:

1. In the preamble itself the members of the League undertake and agree to promote international peace and security by the acceptance of obligations not to resort to war.

2. By the prescription of open, just and honorable relations between nations.

3. By the firm establishment of understandings of international law as the actual rule of conduct among nations, and

4. By the maintenance of justice and the scrupulous respect for all treaty obligations in the dealings of organised peoples with one another.

2. In Article VIII the members of the League "recognise that the maintenance of peace requires the reduction of national armaments," it being universally recognised that the maintenance of great armies tends to bring on wars.

3. Article XI declares that any threat of war, whether immediate, affecting the members of the League or not, is a matter of concern to the whole League, and action shall be taken "to safeguard the peace of nations."

4. Any member of the League has "a friendly right" to bring to the attention of the Assembly or the Council "any circumstance whatever affecting international peace."

5. By Article XII, the members of the League agree in case of any dispute likely to lead to a rupture that they will submit the matter either to arbitration or to inquiry by the Council, and they agree in no case to resort to war until three months after the award of the arbitrators or of the report by the Council. The provisions relating to submission of disputes to the Council are full and specific; they open the door to a just and honorable settlement of differences.

6. Article XIV provides for the establishment of the "Permanent Court of International Justice." That Court has been brought into being largely through the labors of Elihu Root. It will be open to all parties to a dispute involving interpretation of treaties, questions of international law, questions of fact as to breaches of international obligations and extent of reparation to be made for such offenses; it will "take cognizance of all disputes of any kind which may be submitted to it by a general or particular convention between the parties."

7. Article XVI imposes the penalty of the boycott against members of the League resorting to war in disregard of Article XII, XIII or XV. The members of the League will "undertake immediately to subject it to the severance of all trade or financial relations and the prohibition of intercourse of its nationals with the nationals of other members." This is a guarantee of peace that, as anybody can see, would prove effective save against a hardened and defiant offender.

8. In this same article any member of the League violating any of its covenants is made subject to the penalty of expulsion.

9. Under Article XVII, in case of dispute between a member of the League and a State not a member or between States not members, the non-member States or States shall be invited to become members and accept the obligations and enjoy the advantages of the League.

10. Article XVIII prohibits secret treaties; no treaty is binding unless it has been registered with the Secretariat of the League. This removes a frequent cause of misunderstandings and war between nations.

So there are ten preventives of war before we come to Article X. Why should they be ignored in discussion. A severe critic might conclude that among Republican campaign orators there was a conspiracy to keep Article X always in the forefront, to fill the minds of the people with the fear that we might be dragged into war without our wishing it, while suppressing all mention of the great preventives of war to which resort would be had under the Covenant before Article X was brought into play. We altogether acquit Mr. Hughes of any thought or purpose of that kind. But it is deplorable that a jurist of his fame and experience should have fallen into the habit with all the other campaign speakers of his party, not of his great reputation, not chargeable, as he is, with knowledge of the principle that should have constrained him to consider the Covenant as a whole.

It is deplorable because the public ought not to be deluded into a profound misunderstanding of the League by this eternal drumming on Article X, and the deathly silence concerning the other preventives of war which the League brings into being.

How France's 'Tiger' Beats Living Cost

The high cost of Summer living has been solved by no less a person than Georges Clemenceau.

In a little, two-room hut, perched on a cliff on the Vendean Coast—the most desolate stretch of seaboard land in France—the former Premier is taking a well-earned rest following his trip to Egypt.

A room at the Normandy Hotel, Deauville, where Ambassador Wallace has accustomed to spend August, would cost about $16,000 for two months. The "Tiger's" lair on the Vendean Coast cost him exactly $35 for the same period.

Moreover, the Normandy Hotel figures would have been for one room. France's Grand Old Man has two—a living and bedroom rolled into one and a tiny kitchen in which a homely fishwife from the neighboring village cooks the slender repast of vegetables and cereals which the Tiger believes has helped him to keep the youthful vigor of a man of forty at the age of seventy-nine.

ONE TRAIN A DAY

A Universal Service representative who visited the former Premier's retreat found it to be a good four miles' walk from the nearest railroad station, which is on a branch line served by one train each way daily. There were no cabs nor conveyances except with its comfortable and well-furnished apartments, with the fruit and flower Gardens adjoining, are attractions for those in pursuit of health or pleasure, rarely exceeded if equalled in any part of the country.

grown (with difficulty) which will be used to make the ex-Premier's coup. Nailed to the wall are two large nets left by the proprietor who rented his home to an ex-Premier. From the single chimney comes smoke. Inside is Rose-Marie, the stout fishwife, barefooted and clad in a single comprehensive smock, who is busy airing the hut in preparation for the distinguished presence which will occupy it in a few days.

HUGE OPEN FIREPLACE

The front door—which is also the only door—opens into the bed-sitting room. It measures about fourteen by twenty feet. The floor is of red rock, scrupulously clean. There are two wooden chairs and a wooden table. At one side is a huge fireplace, flanked by enormous rocks welded in with clay and in the fireplace is burning a pile of dry seaweed, filling the place with an extraordinarily sweet fragrance.

Only the bed is a concession to the greatness of the solitary diplomat who is presently to occupy it. It is a large four-poster of carved oak, a prize that would make an acquisitive tourist's mouth water, and on it are sheets of the finest linen.

"But I don't know I'm sure whether Monsieur Georges will sleep on them," said Rose-Marie, despairingly. "Last year when he came here he threw my sheets, that were my mother's before me, on the floor and went to sleep between the blankets!"

From Rose-Marie the Universal Service representative obtained an idea of the Tiger's menu-card for his vacation:

Breakfast at 4:30 a.m. Cooked cats, fresh milk, grapes or a pear. Lunch at 11 a.m.—Vegetable soup, dry bread, fresh water.

Dinner at 6 p.m.—Boiled fresh fish, vegetable soup, boiled potatoes.

The ex-Premier's daily schedule was obtained from the same authoritative source:

Rises at 4 a.m. Breakfast at 4:30. Brisk walk along the cliffs or beach until 8:30. Opening and reading of day's mail. Lunch. Rest until 4 p.m. Brisk walk, visiting neighborhood cottages. Dinner. Letter-writing or study until 8:30. Bed.

Clemenceau has been asked for an interview only twice, since he found his retreat in Vendee. The first time he told the reporter to interview his cook; the second time he invited him to dinner and talked about fishing!

Following his return from Venice, the Tiger, if he is not by that time elected to the French Senate from the Cotes-du-Nord, intends to tour India, China and Japan, and may return to France by way of the United States.

Italy's New 'Soul'

(New York Times)

A writer in The London Nation waxes enthusiastic over the recent industrial disturbances in Italy. He does not expect a revolution. He does not think that Italy will be Sovietized. But he proclaims a great event—Italy's finding of her own soul. This is more than a new Renaissance. It is more significant than even the Italian Risorgimento. For in a kind of wonderful creative effort a soul has been given to Italy anew.

This seems a highly spiritual interpretation of a pretty materialistic process. To seize upon the property of another has not been heretofore recognized as a means of grace. It somehow appears to have more to do with the stomach than with the soul. At the time of the Renaissance there was an unquestioned quickening of the national life. The Risorgimento was a period of revival, but it was a revival of the spirit of nationality, a new effort to lift Italy from her sunken and divided condition. To be able to see a parallel to all this in a possible readjustment of the ownership and control of Italian factories requires a vision keener than that of the ordinary mortal.

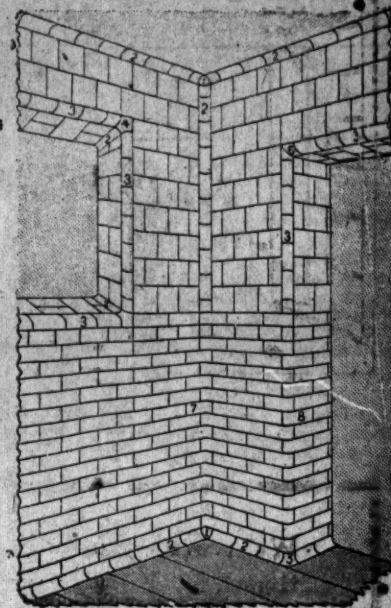

Ab, but it means the doom of capitalism! It marks the ending of the old order and the bringing in of a new one, with all the dew and odors of the Spring upon it. If so, the Italian workmen themselves do not know it. They have some very concrete and rather sordid aims. They want more wages. They desire more power. Very likely they may get both, to a certain extent. That is implied in the compromise which the practical Giolitti is trying to effect. A representation of workers in the control of industrial corporations is not unknown outside of Italy, and may be introduced there on a larger scale. And the low rates of pay may well be raised somewhat.

But all this can happen without toppling over the pillars of society. It is to be thought of by sensible minds as one evidence more of the slow improvement in labor conditions familiar to the world over, and not at all deserving to be talked about in terms of the Apocalypse.

Policeman's Many Duties

Disagreeable Tasks That Fall To The Lot Of The Man On The Beat

(New York Times)

Every night shortly before midnight the doors of police stations throughout the city are secured tightly and no one is permitted to enter. At that time a company of uniformed policemen is assembled in the back room of every house. It is an important and solemn hour in the life of the city police.

At a word of command the company in orderly formation marches out upon the main floor of the station, where it faces in several lines deep the station desk. The lieutenant in charge of the precinct calls the roll, and then gives the men their orders for the night's work. These consist for the most part of condential alarms for the apprehension of felons and others wanted by the police, instructions for individual policemen and advice to the men in general. He does not detain them long—ten minutes at the most—when they file from the house in broken ranks to take the various posts of duty assigned them. The same procedure takes place in the daytime, when a fresh platoon of men is sent to work.

Old veterans go to their posts with unsmiling faces, hoping secretly that the night will be quiet and uneventful, but ready and willing, nevertheless, to take the best or the worst that the night may offer. Long years of duty have habituated them to the hardships of the job, and they have passed through so many experiences that the most unusual adventures only mildly thrill them. It is not a pleasant thing to chase a fleeing felon up a flight of tenement-house stairs or into a dark and uncertain alley—policemen have been killed doing this—where the pursued often has the advantage if he desires to put up a fight. It is an experience that tests the mettle of every policeman, yet old-timers on the force do not flinch or hesitate if they are called upon to engage in such pursuits.

The success or failure of a policeman depends on the man himself. If he is young, intelligent and likes his work he is pretty sure to give a good account of himself. He is ambitious to accomplish something which will win him promotion and a place in the Detective Bureau, and he tries to make the most of his opportunities. Such a policeman is eager to do a little more than he is expected to, and he frequently spends his hours of duty in work on a case. To the ambitious policeman every experience is an adventure. He keeps his eyes and his ears open, and he studies the characters and houses on his post.

MANY AND VARIOUS DUTIES

Policemen's duties are more numerous than are generally supposed. They are sometimes called upon to perform necessary but unpleasant duties. After a man has been killed in an accident and his identity established it is usually the police who first bring the news of his death to his wife or relatives. It is a task that every policeman dreads, and no matter how frequently he may be sent on such an errand he does not find that it becomes any easier. On such occasions he is always instructed to break the news as gently as possible.

A policeman, who was known as being "thick" was once despatched on such a mission because there was no one else at the time who could be sent. He was admonished to do it very gently. On arriving at the flat in question he rapped loudly on the door with his nightstick. When the widow opened it he blurted out: "I say, do you know a good undertaker? You'll need one for your old man went and got killed by an automobile." The widow promptly swooned, recovered and went into hysterics, and had to have the services of an ambulance surgeon.

Policemen have the same affection for dumb animals that other persons have. They are sometimes summoned to shoot a horse, dog, or cat which, having met with an accident, must be put to death. There are numerous manuals instructing them how to go about the task. They are advised to place the muzzle of the gun at a point four or five inches above a line drawn across the eyes of a horse, and to aim at the forehead an inch to the left of the point where the hair curls. In attempting to despatch the animal the aim is often faulty.

and it takes several shots to do the work.

An old policeman was ordered to a city street to shoot a sick horse. He did not like the task, and after taking aim he closed his eyes and fired. The animal's head dropped limply, and the officer hastened away to the station house to make out his report.

It happened that he failed to hit the horse, and bystanders composed of small boys from the neighborhood called to him to come back. The policeman, believing that they were trying to have some fun at his expense, kept on his way. A youthful bicycle policeman came along at the moment, and seeing what had happened, despatched the animal. Encountering the policeman later he said:

"That was a good joke on you, old fellow; you thought you shot that horse, but you missed him. But don't worry, I saved you from disgrace and ridicule, for I shot him myself."

A HUMANE POLICEMAN

"Don't you suppose I know I missed him?" the elderly policeman replied. "Orders is orders, but they can be circumnavigated. I wouldn't shoot a horse for anything. I saw he was going fast, so I just fired at the ground, realising he would be officially dead by the time I got my report made out. Ride away on your bike, son, and don't think you know more than an old fellow like me."

Policemen are frequently sent to places where riots and fights and murders are supposed to have occurred. It is a common thing for an excited citizen to appear at a station house with the information that a man is murdering his wife at such and such an address. The police take no chances, and if the facts warrant it a policeman is despatched to the scene of trouble. He finds usually that it is nothing more than a domestic dispute which does not require police intervention. A policeman on such an errand heard a loud crash of crockery and glassware as he ascended the stairs. He rapped on the door with his nightstick, desiring to put an end to the row before someone was hurt.

"Open the door," he commanded. "I'm a policeman."

The door was opened by a well-dressed woman, who appeared smiling and unperturbed. "Well," he demanded, "what's the row all about?"

The woman assured him there was no trouble at all and led him to the kitchen, where her husband, the troublermaker, was calmly breaking crockery with a large hammer. He explained that they were preparing to move and that he was taking this method of getting rid of a lot of cracked and broken junk which was too far gone to give away. He had purchased, he explained, a lot of brand new kitchenware and crockery which would be ornamental in their new home. He was sorry to have disturbed the peace of the neighborhood and to have brought out the police.

Complaints of boys playing baseball, cat and other games in city streets are more numerous today than ever, and policemen are kept busy chasing these young merrymakers from one street to another, and from neighborhood to neighborhood. The offenders too commonly regard policemen as their natural enemies, when as a matter of fact most policemen recall that they were once boys themselves and liked to play games in city streets. Taxpayers complain that windows are broken and property damaged, and they assert that the city should have more neighborhood playgrounds and play streets.

The Years

BY ELIA WHEELER WILCOX

The years fly on faster and faster. Each one seems more hurried and fleet.

Time was I deemed age a disaster. But now I hold my age sweet. Time was I served youth as a master. But now life must serve at my feet.

The hopes I am leaving behind me. The joys of today and of yore. The love lights that dazzle and blind me. The pleasures that make up life's store.

Are nothing to those that shall find me. In realms that are waiting before. I doubt that old orthodox story. Of golden paved city and throne.

Yet know there are regions of glory. That never an atlas has shown. And I know as my head becomes hoary. My soul will be nearing its own.

I know I am building my heaven. While journeying on by the way. Each thought is a nail that is driven. In structures that cannot decay.

And the mansion at last will be given. To me as I shape it today.

My soul will be nearing its own.

My soul will be nearing its own.

My soul will be nearing its own.

My soul will be nearing its own.

My soul will be nearing its own.
